

THE USES OF PAPER.

How Paper Car Wheels Are Made—Some Interesting Facts.

Paper car wheels are composed entirely of paper rings pressed together under a weight of six tons, and then fastened by means of bolts and steel tire put on them, when they are ready for use. Laid loosely, the rings stack as high as the shoulders of an ordinary man. Under treatment they sink to the thickness required. If the tire should wear or fall off the wheel, or the train run from the track, there would be no danger of their breaking, as they are very flexible, and would spring. A paper ball can be rendered so solid that nothing but a diamond tool can cause an indentation in it. At the mill is a square block of compressed paper fastened on a turning lathe, and so hard that, if a fine steel chisel is held against it when moving, instead of cutting the paper, it will break the chisel into a hundred pieces. The strength is astonishing. You can take a $5 note of the Bank of England, twist it into a rope, suspend 339 pounds upon one end of it, and not injure it in the slightest degree. Bath tubs and pots are formed by compressing paper made out of linen fibers and annealed—that is, painted over with a composition which becomes a part thereof, and is fireproof. The tubs last indefinitely, never leak, and, put in the fire, will not burn up. You can beat on them with a hammer and not injure them. Plates compressed and annealed are very durable; you can not only wash them, but drop them upon the floor and stand upon them. The fork can be used for any practical purpose, and the knife can always be kept sharp. Paper can be substituted for wood, converted into picture frames and colored like walnut, cherry and the like. Bedsteads are fashioned the same as car wheels, only of long strips instead of rings. They are very beautiful and lasting. Cooking or heating stoves are also annealed, and it is impossible to burn them out; they are less costly than iron. A house can be literally constructed of, and furnished with every convenience, in paper. The printing press, type and all the fixtures of the office could be concocted of this material, and more cheaply than of the ordinary kind. A complete steam engine can be thus manufactured and do all required duty. Clothes and shoes will come in the future. Twenty-nine hours are needed to transfer linen fiber into a car wheel.

Solid card-like paper was made as early as the fifth century, but it is based on the authority of the Arabian historians, and largely conceded, that linen paper did not come into use until 1270, or, at most, but a short time before. The cotton card or paper known previously was of a thick, coarse, woolly texture, brittle and inferior.

THE DEVIL CAME UP TO COOL OFF.

"One evening, above Lewisburg, on the Arkansas," said Capt. Paul Boyton, "I was on the lookout for some place where I could stop, or for some person from whom I could obtain information, when, near the bank of the river, I discovered smoke issuing from the chimney of a small cabin. I hauled to and blew my bugle. For some time the smoke issuing from the chimney was the only sign of life. Finally a man, an easy kind of individual, came walking down leisurely, regarding me curiously.

"How far is it to Lewisburg?" I asked.

"It's a pretty good distance."

"But how far do you call it?"

"I don't call it."

"Confound it, man, is it two, three or four thousand miles?"

"I reckon it's one of the numbers."

"Then I realized that I had met a kinsman of the Arkansas Traveler. My irritation, which had at first been exhibited, subsided, and, desiring to get as much information as possible, I asked, pointing to a bar:

"Which side of the channel shall I take?"

"Either side you please."

"Which do you consider the better?"

"I am not attendin' to other people's business."

"Which side do the steamboats take?"

"It's owin' to what Captain is aboard."

"Well, bringing the thing down to a point, how long will it take me to get to Lewisburg?"

"It's owin' ter how fast you travel."

"My friend, I think you are the biggest fool in Arkansas."

"An', stranger, I think you are the devil come up to cool off. Go home."

The Mason & Hamilton Co.

At Milan, Italy, they have recently had a Musical Industrial Exhibition and Competition, under royal patronage; at which were collected and compared, during a period of several months, the largest number and greatest variety of musical instruments, old and new ever brought together. America was honored in the award to the Mason & Hamilton Organ Company of the highest medal, and the only one in this department. Considering that 250 awards were given, altogether, this distinction was very marked. It is a continuation of the triumphs of these famous organ makers at every one of the World's Fairs for fourteen years; to which there has been no exception.—The Manhattan.

AN ELEPHANT STORY.

The elephant seemed to get tired first, and just as the first streak of dawn began to show itself in the sky he turned and walked leisurely away. For a minute or two I heard him crashing among the thickets, and then all was quiet again, as if he'd gone right away.

"Now," I thought, "is my time to decamp, too," and down the tree I slipped as nimbly as an acrobat. But I soon found I had been reckoning without my host, for I had hardly touched the ground when there came a crash like fifty mad bulls charging through as many glass-houses, and out from the thicket, with his great white tusks leveled at me like bayonets, came my friend the elephant, who had been on the watch for me all the time.

Whether I should have run or stood my ground, and how I should have fared in either case, can never be known now, for just at that moment my foot slipped and down I came, close to the tree. The next moment there was a crash as if two trains had run into each other, and I made sure that I was knocked into a hundred pieces at least, and that it was all up with me.

I soon became aware, however, that I was still alive and sound, while a shrill, frightened cry overhead told me plainly that it was the elephant who had got the worst of it this time. I scrambled to my feet gingerly enough, for the brute's great fore-legs were stamping and pounding like steam-hammers within arm's length of me, and there I saw a sight which, scared as I was, made me laugh till I could hardly stand.

I had fallen just in time to escape the blows of the elephant's tusks, which had struck themselves so deep into the tree that he could not pull them out again, and there he was, hard and fast, like a ship run aground. The animal's look of disgust and bewilderment at finding himself in such a fix was as good as a play to behold; but just then I was in no humor to stop and admire it, for I knew that he might break loose yet, and that if he did it would be all up with me. My first impulse was to take to my heels at once, but the next moment I thought better of it, and decided to settle Mr. Elephant instead. I quickly picked up and reloaded my gun, which had luckily escaped his notice, or he would have trampled it to bits, and, scrambling into the tree again, sent a bullet into his forehead, which did its business, and left him standing bolt upright in a very picturesque attitude indeed.

"There are two sides to everything," said the lecturer; "I repeat it, there are two sides." At this juncture a tired-looking little man stood up in the front seat to say: "Well, if you've no objections, I will just step out and see if there are two sides to this hall. I know there is an inside, and if I find there is an outside you'll know it by my not coming back. You needn't be alarmed if I shouldn't return." And as he walked up the aisle he was followed by the admiring eyes of the whole audience. Their sympathies were with him, but they were deficient in moral courage.

Bishop Bloomfield has been a widower and had several children. He married a second time a widow with a family. One day he asked a country clergyman to dine with him telling him, "You will only meet our family party. The clergyman found a much larger number assembled in the drawing-room than he had anticipated, and was introduced by the Bishop thus: "These are mine, those are hers, and those are ours."

JOLLIE had a dinner party, and, notwithstanding his having a boil on his dexter hand, he insisted on taking the head of the table and carving the turkey. After he had been awkwardly juggling away at the deceased bird his wife rather petulantly remarked: "The way you go to work at that, Mr. Jollie, one would think you were a carpenter."

"What tradesman could I better emulate with a hand-saw?" was the quick reply.

The proprietor of a canning factory at Gainesville, Ga., was much annoyed at the constant ringing of the bell of a church directly opposite. He protested without avail. Finally he employed a traveling preacher to hold services in his factory twice every Sunday, and to summon an audience had his steam-whistle blown for four hours on a stretch. On the third Sunday the church capitulated.

"Is the doctor in?" asked an anxious-looking young man. "No sir," replied the person addressed; "but you can leave an order on the slate. Is it a very urgent case?" "Well, yes," the young man said—"rather urgent, I think. Just as I started away from home my youngest brother was falling out of a second-story window."

"I HAVE SAW," remarked the surgeon, opening his case. "You mean I have seen," interrupted the school-teacher, with the felon on his thumb. "I have saw," firmly replied the physician, and then he sawed the teacher's thumb off to prove it. This fable does not differ from the fact that all that glitters is not nickel-plated.—Hawke Eye.

SARAH'S COMPLIMENT.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed Sarah, looking into the glass; "how awfully my hair looks. I haven't combed it in two days."

"Why, Sarah," said Lydia, "is it possible? I never should have suspected it. It looks as well as I ever saw it." Sarah didn't know whether to feel complimented or insulted.—Boston Transcript.

A PHYSICIAN of Paterson, N. J., was called in haste to attend a lady who was suffering excruciating torture from the lacerating effects of sixteen false teeth which she thought she had swallowed, but which were soon found under her pillow. The recovery was instantaneous, as was also the dismissal of the doctor.

Nothing Could Be Stronger. 1400 PAIN STREET, ST. LOUIS, MO., Jan. 20, 1881. H. H. WATSON & Co., 59½—I have been troubled with kidney disease since my childhood. It would be impossible for me to describe how much I have suffered. Your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has done me more good than the combined skill of all the physicians I have ever tried during my entire life. CAROLINE F. FLEMING.

ANOTHER blowing up of rocks at Hell Gate will take place as soon as the arrangements now being made by General Newton are completed. This time the area to be exploded will be three times as great as that of 1876. Eleven acres of the reef known as Flood Rock are being tunneled at a depth of fifty or sixty feet, and when this work is completed, two years hence or so, the whole reef will be broken up with one scattered charge of dynamite. About seven acres are already completed. Halletts Rock, broken up in 1876, has been fished out and carried away until there is now a twenty-six foot channel at low water, where six years ago was one of the barriers of navigation.

It is believed that even newspaper correspondents are occasionally capable of exaggeration. At all events they are now telling of a boy in Paris who has a telescopic eye. One eye is as large as a silver dollar and the other as small as a French pea. Up to a few months ago this large eye was of no use. But after an operation on it an astonishing change occurred. The eye became telescopic in its range, and the boy could expand or contract the pupil at will. At night he could see the rings and moons of Jupiter and the newly discovered satellites of Mars. Then it was discovered that the smaller eye was microscopic, a drop of water appearing to him through it as a world of life. The oculists, microscopists, and astronomers of Paris are said to be in a state of great excitement over the boy.

The report of the majority of the Committee appointed to audit the expenses of the illness and death of the late President allows Dr. Bliss $25,000, Drs. Agnew and Hamilton, $15,000 each, and Drs. Reyburn, Boynton and Susan Edson, $10,000 each. The minority, in their report, say:

We do not object to the payment by the general government of the funeral expenses of the late President, who was stricken down in the performance of his duties, and because of his occupying that public station. Our objection to the report grows out of the recommendation for the payment for the services of the physicians and surgeons who attended the late President. We are perfectly willing to concede that a liberal compensation should be allowed the physicians and surgeons, a compensation in excess even of what it was possible for any of these medical attendants to have earned in their ordinary practice during that time. But the sums recommended to be paid by the majority of the committee are excessive. We are of opinion there was no extraordinary medical skill exhibited in the treatment of the case, and nothing calling for an extraordinary allowance for professional services, but while willing to be liberal we could not consent to the manner of payment recommended, nor to the extravagance and wanton lavishment of the public funds.

There are a great many private citizens who hold about that same view.

AND now De Lesseps is going to flood the Sahara Desert from the Mediterranean Sea, the French Cabinet Council approving of his plan. It has been decided, and the decision was a hair-breadth escape—13 to 12—that women can not be educated for the medical profession at Harvard College. That Governing Board came pretty nearly getting tied on women that time. It is stated that the Faculty does not object to the women themselves, but the time-honored principle of educating men only must be maintained. That lets the women out.

RESCUED FROM DEATH. William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with sickness of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and sleep, and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when, to my surprise, I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past. I write this, hoping every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will take Dr. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken in my whole life."

ENGLAND made a great fuss about the "farce at Washington"—referring to the tedious trial of Guiteau—and advised this nation to make short work of the assassin. Singular indeed is it, that right on the heels of this farce one Maclean shoots at the crown head of that country and is acquitted on the ground of insanity. Now, it is a question whether Maclean is as crazy as Guiteau, and it is self-evident that Guiteau knew he was committing a crime against the law.

Col. R. G. INGERSOLL has been replying in New York, to Talmage's assaults and at his lecture Sunday night, speaking of his defeat for the Illinois Governorship, he said:

They say I was defeated for Governor of Illinois because I was an infidel, and that I am an infidel because I was defeated. That's logic. Now I'll tell you. They asked me whether I was an infidel, and I said I was! I was defeated. I preserved my manhood and lost an office. If everybody were as frank as I was, some men now in office would be private citizens, and would rather be what I am than hold any office in the world and be a slimy hypocrite.

The Queen of England does not forget those in death whom she held in high esteem in life. On the anniversary of Lord Beaconsfield's death, she sent two wreaths of immortelles and primroses to be placed upon his grave.

FACTS ABOUT UMBRELLAS.

Antiquarians say that the umbrella was invented shortly after the flood, and has been the least improved upon of all appliances for human comfort, the shape being now as it was in the youthful days of the world. An umbrella is much like a pigeon as to the question of possession—the last one who gets it owns it. The following facts about umbrellas—especially the last one—may serve every reader a splendid purpose sooner or later: To place your umbrella in a rack indicates that it is about to be exchanged for a woman's dress. To carry an umbrella carried over a woman, the man getting the woman's dress, it indicates marriage. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies that an eye is to be lost by the man who follows you. To put a cotton umbrella by the door of a silk one signifies that "exchange is no robbery." To lend an umbrella signifies that "I am a fool." To carry an umbrella high, close to the head, to keep out men and knock off men's hats, signifies "I am a woman." To go without an umbrella in a rain-storm shows I am sure of getting rheumatism, and will have to use St. Jacobs Oil to get well. To keep a fine umbrella for your own use and a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil always in the house, in case of rheumatism or accident, would signify that you are a real philosopher.

The following communication to the editor of the Salem (Mass.) Register shows how an artist treated his visitor: "I would have accepted your kind invitation to visit you in your new quarters with pleasure before this had not my old enemy, Mr. Rheumatism, pounced on me so suddenly. He arrived last Friday, and, without stopping to send up his card, rushed in and grasped me by the hand with such a grip that in a few hours my hand and wrist were so badly swollen and painful that I felt as though one of Mr. Hatch's coal teams had run over me. Mr. Rheumatism has been a constant visitor of mine for several years; he always sweeps in and puts on a great many airs, making himself at home, devouring my substance and leaving me poor in flesh and pocket. Last winter he came and stayed two months. I then decided that the next time he came I would change some diet. I was somewhat at a loss what to feed him with, but finally concluded to give him three square meals a day of St. Jacobs Oil—morning, noon and night. This fare he is disgusted with, and is packing up his trunk and leaving by to-morrow or next day; says he cannot stop any longer, as he has pressing business elsewhere. He is a treacherous fellow, and he intends visiting some of our Salem friends; if he does, just give him the same fare that I did and he will stop long." J. S. LEFAYOR.
